HEADLINE · FACEBOOK VIEWS

Up 94% month-on-month. Our biggest month on Facebook to date.

Chisomo's Sawing Call, the leopard-vocalisation reel released in March, kept building through April, reaching 4.7M views and pulling 11,400 net new Facebook followers behind it. Instagram held steady at our off-season median, adding 859 followers and posting 593.9K views.

The bigger story sits inside the Facebook numbers. With Americans now making up 15.1% of the audience, our US following alone is roughly 18,400 people, six times the size of the entire page when we first took it over.

A site visit to Zambia is planned for July; performing at this level during off-season is the strongest possible signal for what's ahead.

i., Highest reach

The Cost of Continuation

A close study of mating intensity in lions, the urgency, the noise, the sheer physical cost of continuing a pride. Our highest IG reach this month.

152.9K VIEWS

ii., Held attention

Taonga

A still, quiet portrait, Taonga lying low in the bush, half-dazed, half-watching. The kind of image that holds attention longer than action footage ever does.

60.7K VIEWS

iii., Quiet truth

Bound by Pride

A cub presses its head against its mother. A small gesture that explains how lion prides actually work, loyalty as architecture, not affection.

@nathalywahast

506K FOLLOWERS · PUBLIC FIGURE

Nathaly Wahast, model and public figure with a deeply personal interest in nature and wildlife. A half-million-strong audience that crosses lifestyle, fashion, and conservation circles, the kind of cultural reach that puts Lion Camp in front of people who don't usually find safari content.

ii.

@theyellowones906

132K FOLLOWERS · ALEXANDER HAUERT

Alexander Hauert runs an outdoor and camping equipment brand with a meaningful B2B-adjacent following. A natural fit for cross-promotion, partnership conversations, and gear-side credibility, exactly the kind of operator-aligned audience we want orbiting the camp.

8.8K FOLLOWERS · ASHISH KUMAR

Ashish Kumar, wildlife photographer and cinematographer specialising in tigers and big cats across India. Smaller account, but high-signal: a peer in the field whose follow signals craft credibility and opens doors for cross-pollination with the Indian wildlife audience.

The Sawing Call.

Chisomo lets out a long sawing call with impalas grazing behind him. Released in March; finished April still climbing. The single piece of work behind almost every Facebook number on this page.

What's working, and what's next.

WHAT'S WORKING

Character-driven storytelling continues to break through.

Chisomo's Sawing Call, released last month and still climbing, is the clearest evidence yet that audiences want named animals, recognisable behaviour, and the rhythm of a single life unfolding. Facebook is flying. Instagram holds median during off-season, the strongest possible signal for what happens once we're back on the ground.

WHAT'S NEXT

Lean into the cast. Add a UGC layer.

We'll keep leaning into the cast, Chisomo, Taonga, and the broader pride. With a Zambia site visit planned for July, on-the-ground material will return to the pipeline. Alongside that, we're shaping a deliberate UGC layer, short-form, raw-feel content that can outperform polished work, and is performing strongly on other accounts across socials in 2026. With our polished work already driving the numbers, bringing this additional layer in next season will add real personality to our social presence.

*The trajectory continues.
The next leg is on-site.*
